PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

In 2005 our agency was fundraising for a major river restoration project. While we had gained widespread support, one holdout remained. An important funding partner was apprehensive over proposed changes to the river. It seemed impossible to gain their approval. Eloquent monologues, fancy graphs or glittery PowerPoint slides could not ease their concern. "Why can't they get it?" I often lamented to my colleagues. After all, we had spent countless hours surveying, modeling, drafting, editing and redrafting plans.

As critical deadlines drew near I again met with a representative of the group. The conversation rapidly eroded into explicit instruction on where I could place "all of my fancy book learnin' and models." A colleague who witnessed the exchange approached me afterwards. He said, "I think I finally recognize the problem. They genuinely don't understand what you're telling them. We need an artist's rendition of the project." Two months later our team unveiled an artist's rendering of the project during the group's annual fundraiser. A gruff voice spoke up and I braced myself for impact "You should have told us it would look like this! If you guys will build that we'll write you a check tonight!"

We had not changed the content of our message but had finally spoken the audience's language. After a decade of mentors and constituents telling me to "keep it simple" and "speak English" I am beginning to understand. Research, data and analysis convicts and directs us in making sound environmental decisions. Technical methodologies and jargon have a place therein. However, we are rendered ineffective when our delivery styles intimidate or frustrate the audience.

Controversial issues abound, from the depletion of aquifers to unpopular fisheries management decisions. Good science alone may not influence outcomes. People will. I encourage you to educate your stakeholders in a practical manner.

Lastly, I am grateful for all who attended the 2010 Oklahoma and Arkansas joint chapter meeting in Fort Smith, AR. I am especially appreciative of those who lent a helping hand. Over eighty Oklahoma fisheries professionals and students were in attendance!

Jim Burroughs, President-Elect, is coordinating the 2011 OKAFS chapter meeting. Please contact him if you would like to provide assistance. Also, please submit your abstracts in a timely manner. This facilitates program development and makes Jim's job easier. See you at the 2011 meeting!

COMMITTEE REPORTS

Activities and Fund Raising Committee – Josh Johnston

Greetings all! As chairman of the activities and fund The Lateral Line—October 2010 raising committee I would like to take this opportunity to ask for assistance. I know next year's meeting is still 6 or 7 months away but it's never too early to start soliciting donations. Donations can be for small items that can be used for door prizes or for larger items that can be for silent auction. Please remember the importance of your efforts. Money raised from these donations is given to students to assist with their educational expenses. Please assist me with collecting an ample number of items to help ensure the Chapter's ability to continue awarding scholarships to students. As a special incentive, individuals collecting donations valued at or above $25 will have a chance for a special yet to be determined prize. Only individuals collecting donations valued at $25 or more will be qualified to win this prize. Last years prize was a very nice buck knife. Thanks for your assistance.

Environmental Concerns – Randy Parham

No new information to report.

Continuing Education – Dan Shoup

I am planning to have workshops on the use of software in fisheries (specifically the Wisconsin Bioenergetics model and the FAST-Fisheries Analysis and Simulation Tool programs) at this year's state chapter meeting.

I have also heard from a couple of people that there might be interest in a workshop on electrofishing theory, with a possible "lab" type component for calibrating electrofishing boats to better standardize effectiveness and facilitate CPUE comparison among districts, labs, etc. I would welcome feedback on this idea. Specifically, would it be worth having a workshop outside of the annual meeting (i.e., sometime during a spring season when the weather is not too cold) to be able to bring electrofishing boats for oscilloscope measurements to calibrate power output, or would you prefer to just cover the theory at an annual meeting with no field calibration (but I could cover the procedure in the theory section). Please let me know (dshoup@okstate.edu or 405-744-9671) if you have an opinion.

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

Greetings all! I hope everyone is having a very exciting and productive semester. I would like to encourage anyone who is interested in fisheries science to be part of this student based, professional organization. The American Fisheries Society provides many opportunities for up and coming fisheries students to meet and interact with fisheries professionals in the field today. By interacting with the student subunit, students have the ability to share their experiences with others and to receive advice from those who have been in their shoes before.

In October, we hosted our annual fisheries techniques demo at Holdenville Lake and Hatchery. This year 40 students and faculty from Southeastern Oklahoma State University, Northeastern State University, and Oklahoma State University attended the event. Here students gained experience in the use of several fisheries assessment gears including gillnets, trap nets, bottom trawls, boat electrofishing, and backpack electrofishing, and also toured the hatchery facilities. I would like to thank Nate Copeland for the tremendous job he did in coordinating this year's event. We would also like to thank Danny Bowen, Bill Newman, and John Davenport for their assistance at the techniques demo.

After elections last spring I would like to welcome our new Vice President, Brent Wilson. I am also glad to report that Joey Schmitt was voted into the Secretary/Treasurer position.

Mike Porta
OSU Sub-unit President
